HUMAN LIFE - The number of human beings now on the earth is estimated at about one thou sard millions. The average age of life is 33% years. One fourth of those born die before they reach the age of seven years, ond one-half before the 17th year. Out of 100 persons about six reach 60 years, while only about one in 1,000 who attain 100 years. Out of 500 only one reaches 80 years. Out of the thousand million living persons, 333,000,000 die annually, 91,000 daily, 3,730 every hour, 60 every minute, conse- him to conduct their business with integrity, capacity and quently one every second. The loss, however, is zeal balanced by the gain in births. Women ase generally stronger than men, until their 50th year, after that period less so. Both births and deaths are more frequent in the night than the dar. One fourth of the men are capable of bearing arms. There are now in the world 3,064 known languages, and in which upward of 1,100 religions or creeds are preached. The more civil ized a country is, the more full of vigor, life and health are the people, and hence the idea that education enjecties and degenerates the human

The Great Battle. PITTSBURG, TENN., via FORT MCHENRY, April 9, 3:20 A. M.-A special to the New York Herald says:

18,000 to 20,000.

One of the greatest and bloodiest battles of modern days has just closed, resulting in the complete rout of the enemy, who attacked us at daybreak Sunday. The battle lasted without intermission during the entire day, and was again renewed Monday morning and continued till 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the enemy commenced their retreat, and are still flying toward Corinth, pursued by a large force of our cavalry. The slaughter on both sides is immense. We have lost, in killed, wounded and missing,

The rebel loss is estimated at from 35,000 to It is impossible in the present confused state of affairs to ascertain any details. I therefore give you the best account possible from observation, having passed through the storm of action during the two days that it raged. The fight was brought on by a body of 300 of the 25th Missouri regiment and General Prentiss's division attacking the advance guard of the rebels, which were supposed to be the pickets of

The rebels immediately advanced on General Prentiss's division on the left wing, pouring vol ley after volley of musketry and riddling our camps with grape, canister and shells. Our forces soon formed into line and returned their fire vigorously, and by the time we were prepared to receive them they had turned their on our left wing under General McClernand. His fire was returned with terrible effect and

From about 9 o'clock, the time your correspondent arrived on the field, until night closed HENRY R. COSTAR-We are selling on the bloody scene, there was no determination of the result of the struggle. The rebels exhibited remarkably good generalship; at times engaging the left with apparently their whole strength, they would suddenly open a terrible and destructive fire on the right and Even our heaviest and most destructive fire on the enemy did not appear to discourage their The fire of Major Tyler's Chicago artillery raked them down in scores, but the smoke would no sooner be dispersed than the breach would again be filled. The most desperate firing took place late in the

To prevent the public from the opposite side of the river, and the other per-They became aware that we were being reinforced, as they could see General Buell's troops from the river bank a short distance above as on the left, to which point they had forced our left wing back, so as to occupy fully two-thirds of our camp, and were fighting their way forward with a desperate degree of confidence in their effort to drive us into the river, and at the same time heavily engaged our right.

Up to this time we had received no reinforcements. Gen Lew Wallace failing to come to our support until the day was over, having taken the wrong road from Crump's Landing and being without other transportations than those used for Quartermaster's and Commissary's stores which were too heavily ladened to ferry any considerable number of Buell's force across the river, those here having been sent to bring the troops from Savannah. We were therefore contending against fearful odds, our forces not exceeding 38,000 while that of the enemy was upwards of 60,000. Our condition at this moment was extremely critical. Large numbers of men were panic Lazelle, Marsh & Gard- struck. Others were worn out by hard fighting with the average number of skulkers had straggled towards the river and could not be recalled Gen. Grant and staff, who had been recklessly riding along the lines during the day, amid the unceasing storm of bullets, grape and shell, now rode from right to left inciting the men to stand firm until our reinforcements could cross the river. Col. Webster, Chief of staff, immediately got into position the heaviest pieces of artillery, pointing in the enemy's right; while a large num, ber of the batteries were planted along the entire line, from the river bank northwest to our extreme right, some two and a half miles distant. About an hour before dusk a general cannon ade was opened upon the enemy from along our whole line; with a perpetual crack of musketry. Such a war was never heard on this continent. For a short time the rebels replied with vigor and effect, but their return shots grew less frequent and destructive, while ours grew more rapid and more terrible. The gunboats Lexington and Tylor, which lay a short distance off, kept raining shell on the re-

This last effort was too much for the enemy, and ere dusk the firing had nearly ceased, when night coming on all the combatants rested from their awful work of blood and carnage. Our men rested on their arms in the position they had occupied at the close of the fight until the forces under Major General Wallace came up and took position on the right and met Buell's force from the opposite side, and Savannah being now converted to the battle ground, the entire right of Gen. Nelson's division was ordered to Gens. McClernand, Sherman and Harlburt's men, though terribly jaded from the previous day's fighting, still maintained their honors won at Donelson, but the resistance of the rebels at all points was terrible, and worthy a better cause. They were not enough, however, for our un-daunted bravery, and the dreadful desolation produced by our artillery, which was sweeping them away like chaff before the wind, but knowing that a defeat here would be a death-blow to their hopes, and that their all depended upon this great struggle, their Generals still urged them on in the face of destruction, hoping by flanking us on the right to turn the tide of battle.

Their success was again for a time cheering as they began to gain ground on us, appearing to have been reinforced, but our left under General ful rapidity, and by eleven o'clock Gen. Buell's forces had succeeded in flanking them and capturing their batteries of artillery. The rebels fied in dismay as from a destroying avalanche, and never made another stand. Gen. Buell followed the retreating rebels, driving them in splendid style, and by half past 5 o'clock the whole rebel army was in full retreat to Corinth, with our cavalry in hot pursuit; with what further result is not known, not having returned up to this bour.

We have taken a large amount of their artillery, and also a number of prisoners. We lost a number of our force, priseners, yesterday, among whom is Gen. Prentiss The number of our force taken has not been
